STUDENT MANUAL EXAMPLE:

- 1) Position yourself along the walkway between the first vertical circle and the zero "G" roll section of BATMAN. Listen to the sound of the train as it travels down the first big hill through the vertical loop and then through the next vertical loop. Is the frequency of the sound due to the train's motion changing pitch? Please explain.
- 2) What is the maximum height of BATMAN THE RIDE? Calculate the speed of the ride at its lowest point.

MATH & SCIENCE DAY—FRIDAY, MAY 20, 2011

Take your lesson plan on the road and show how math and physical science work in the world around us. Math & Science Day is a program that is created for the younger mathematician and uses world class thrill rides to bring math and science to life. This one-of-a-kind experience includes an entertaining and educational show presented by Fermilab which showcases experiments dealing with the cryogenics of high-energy particle physics. Shows take place throughout the day. A FREE Math & Science Day manual is available to download at sixflags.com/greatamerica under the Events page. These manuals can be used to create a lesson plan for students to work through on the day of their Six Flags visit. Online promo code: MATH
